

NORTH CAROLINA
OFFICE OF STATE ARCHAEOLOGY
2019 LECTURE SERIES

TROWEL BLAZERS

WOMEN MAKING HISTORY

A World of Transformation: The Lives of Catawba Indian Women, 1746 - 1840

Dr. Brooke Bauer
Assistant Professor, History and Native American Studies
University of South Carolina Lancaster

Dr. Brooke Bauer is a citizen of the Catawba Indian Nation of South Carolina and her research concentrates specifically on the ways in which Catawba Indian women created, promoted, and preserved a Catawba identity as they adapted to the changes occurring inside and outside Catawba tribal boundaries during the eighteenth- and early-nineteenth-century. Her talk looks at women's intimate relationship to Catawba land through their shared history, kinship connections, and their economic productivity.

Focusing on these three characteristics, one can see historical continuities in Catawba ways of building a nation through the actions of women.

Thursday, August 22nd, 2019
11:00am - 12:00pm
Archives Building Auditorium
109 E. Jones Street, Raleigh

For more information, visit archaeology.ncdcr.gov/get-involved
Unable to attend? View on YouTube!

