Charles A. Wetzell Papers.

William S. Powell was born in 1919 in Johnston County, North Carolina. He graduated from the University of North Carolina in 1940, having transferred to Chapel Hill after two years at Mitchell College. Powell was sent to Fort Bragg in July 1941 by his local draft board. On July 15, he was formally inducted into the U.S. Army and sent to train at Fort Knox, Kentucky. Because of his high scores on the Army General Classification Test and the fact that he was a college graduate, Powell was pulled out of basic training and sent to the new Armored Force School at Fort Knox. He eventually served in the military intelligence branch in the Pacific Theater during World War II. Powell remained in the Armored Force School for several years and gained experience as a court martial clerk, watching and reporting on signs of suspicious activity of foreign students and military personnel. During his schooling, Powell was sent to several different locations, including Ohio State University, to learn intelligence; and briefly to Wisconsin and Mississippi. Eventually Powell was transferred to the 1164th Engineer Combat Group and dispatched to the Philippines. His unit was stationed in Manila and contained a small group of men and officers who supervised units building landing strips, bridges, roads, water systems, and various other structures, as well as providing reconnaissance. Powell stayed in Manila until Japan surrendered in September 1945, and was then sent to Tokyo Bay to continue the same type of work the unit had been involved with in the Philippines. After being in the army for about four and a half years, Powell was sent home and discharged at Fort Bragg on January 8, 1946.

After his time in the army, Powell returned to Chapel Hill to earn degrees in both history and library science. He served as a librarian at Yale University for one year and then returned to North Carolina to work as a research historian at the North Carolina Department of Archives and History. In 1952 Powell became an assistant librarian in the North Carolina Collection at UNC, and in 1958 he was appointed curator. Powell became a professor of history at UNC in 1973 and continued to teach until his retirement in 1986. During his career, Powell has written and edited many books and articles, several of which are still used as textbooks in classrooms today. In 2000 Powell was presented the North Carolina Award for Literature. The William S. Powell Collection consists of a large variety of papers and documents. Nearly one half of the collection is composed of newspapers and magazines that he saved during the war; these are all grouped together and arranged chronologically. There are also several boxes containing novels, Bibles, prayer books, and War Department manuals and guides. The last box contains more than fifty posters created during World War II that convey various messages. There is very little correspondence, photographs, or personal papers included in the collection, but it is rich with publications published during the war years.

These papers were collected by the Wilson County Historical Society to capture the stories and materials of World War II veterans from Wilson County. The files were originally contained in nine 3½-inch 3-ring binders, copies of which were also to be filed in the Wilson County Public Library and the academic libraries at Barton College and Wilson Technical Community College. John N. Hackney, Jr., a veteran of World War II, and Betty Ray McCain, former secretary of the Department of Cultural Resources, were the primary collectors of the materials. The collection includes files concerning 268 World War II soldiers from Wilson County, as well as 30 veterans from nearby counties, mostly friends and relatives of Hackney. These files contain copies of personal reminiscences; enlistment and discharge papers; cards and letters; orders; photographs; newspaper clippings; obituaries; correspondence with the project coordinators; and a few compact disks. Some original materials are also included. Miscellaneous records include project correspondence and publicity; information concerning similar projects in other states; lists of soldiers; unit histories; publications; files concerning four World War I soldiers from Wilson County; and a small cache of original records from World War II.

World War II - important dates
   Young American Patriots - introduction and Wilson County pages

Papers of Capt. Rifton Dixon Apple Jr. of Guilford County, reflecting his service in the U.S. Army Air Force during World War II and afterwards. Apple left college in January 1942 to enlist in the armed forces and was assigned to the 82nd Machine Records Unit as a clerk, stationed in Tampa, Florida. In May 1943, he was approved for the Army Air Force Officer Candidate School in Miami Beach. Upon graduation in August, he was commissioned second lieutenant and named assistant adjutant of the 26th Tactical Reconnaissance Group of the Ninth Air Force in Reading, Pennsylvania. In November, Lieutenant Apple was reassigned to the 10th Photo Reconnaissance Group in Meridian, Mississippi, where he was classified as a special services officer. An outstanding high school baseball player, Apple’s “special services” were to organize recreational activities for his unit, including sporting events and movie screenings. He was posted overseas in February, 1944, and on June 15 was promoted first lieutenant while stationed in England. Apple reached France about six weeks after D-Day and served in Europe for the remainder of the war. He was promoted to captain in January 1946 and, after returning home in October, decided to remain in the service. Captain Apple continued on active duty, stationed in California and Texas, until January 1953.

142 (Cont.) Cecil M. Yandle Papers.

Contains 11” X 17” photograph of the USS Medea, with legend attached showing service ribbons earned by Shopkeeper Third Class Cecil M. Yandle of Mecklenburg County in the U.S. Navy.

The Mary A. Brogden Collection contains the papers of two of her relatives, Blackwell M. Brogden and Blackwell Markham, who served in the United States armed forces during World War II. Lt. Blackwell M. Brogden was the husband of Mary A. Brogden. They were married in 1949 and had eight children together. Blackwell Brogden was born April 25, 1921, in Durham, North Carolina, and he spent the majority of his life there. He had a brother, W. J. Brogden Jr., who joined the U.S. Army during World War II. Brogden attended Durham High School, and in 1942 he received a bachelor’s degree from the University of North Carolina (UNC). In 1948, Brogden earned a law degree from UNC as well.

After college graduation in the fall of 1942, Brogden joined the U.S. Navy and served for the duration of the war. Brogden spent the majority of his service in the South Pacific on two different ships, the USS Mississippi and the USS Ingraham. He was present in Tokyo Bay when the treaty was signed ending the war against Japan but was not on the USS Missouri where the formal surrender took place. Capt. Blackwell Markham was the uncle of Lt. Blackwell M. Brogden. He was born in Durham, North Carolina, on March 31, 1897, the youngest of eleven children. He was the only one of his siblings that did not attend Trinity College (now Duke University) and instead went to UNC on a scholarship. He earned a degree from UNC in 1917 and participated in the Army ROTC program while there. In 1918 he earned a master’s degree from UNC, then attended the first two years of medical school there. In 1920 Markham transferred to Harvard Medical School, where he completed his medical degree in 1922. Markham never married and in 1942, at the age of 45, he enlisted in the U.S. Army Medical Corps and served until the end of the war. He served mostly in North Africa and Italy. According to Mary A. Brogden, Markham never operated on another patient after he returned from the war. The Mary A. Brogden Collection contains a few pieces of military and personal correspondence from both men, as well as some papers concerning their military service. There are also some photographs and a large collection of picture postcards. Half of the collection is comprised of a variety of publications that they collected during their service overseas. For more information about Capt. Blackwell Markham and Lt. Blackwell M. Brogden, contact the Southern Historical Collection at the University of North Carolina, where most of their personal papers have been deposited.

143 Contains the military and personal correspondence of both Capt. Blackwell Markham and Lt. Blackwell M. Brogden. The folders are labeled to identify to which man they belonged. The first five folders contain military correspondence belonging to Markham from 1941 to 1945. The last of these folders contains undated correspondence. The next two folders contain miscellaneous items and blank medical charts and paperwork, also from Markham. The last three folders contain papers belonging to Brogden, including his military papers and service records, personal correspondence and photographs, and military correspondence and memoranda. This box also includes two legal-sized publications: “Darby’s Rangers: 1942-1944” and “Ricordo Di Genova,” written in Italian.

144 Contains items belonging to Markham. The first folder includes a variety of maps [nine removed and filed as MilColl.WWII.Maps.40-48], and the next two folders contain church bulletins and religious pamphlets dating from 1942 to 1944, and playbills for concerts and plays. The fourth folder contains newspaper clippings, most of which are undated and are arranged in the order in which they were received. There are two folders of negatives, one folder containing a variety of British and American military pamphlets, one folder with issues of Britain Magazine Junior from October 1944 to January 1945, and one folder of miscellaneous publications.

[149-152] William Pittman Ricks Papers

Papers reflecting the service of Lt. William Pittman Ricks of Rocky Mount in the U.S. Navy during and after World War II. Ricks was born July 21, 1914, the second son of Wilson Whitaker and Sallie Pittman Ricks of Rocky Mount. His brothers, Robert Henry Ricks (“Bob,” born 1909) and Joseph Burton Ricks (“Burt,” born 1918), also served during the war and figure prominently in his wartime correspondence. Bill Ricks attended Riverside Military Academy of Gainesville, Georgia, from 1930 to 1932, and graduated from Duke University in 1936. Soon thereafter, he went to work for Liggett and Myers Tobacco Company, a lifelong association he maintained even after his retirement in 1979. While attending the tobacco market in Waycross, Georgia, in 1937, Ricks met Jurelle (“Judy”) Mullis Selby, a twenty-year-old mother of a two-year-old boy (James Edward Selby). They maintained a summer friendship during his subsequent annual trips to Waycross. The friendship would kindle to romance during an exchange of wartime letters.

Ricks enlisted in the U.S. Navy on January 16, 1942, and assigned a rating of storekeeper third class. After boot camp, he was posted to the navy yard at Charleston as an assistant to the base chaplain and librarian. The earliest surviving letter to his mother, dated July 20, 1942, was written from Charleston. Other letters to his mother that year were postmarked Key West, Norfolk, New Orleans, and the Canal Zone. During a voyage from New Orleans to the Naval Air Station in Panama, Ricks recorded notes for a diary, but there is no evidence that he maintained a daily journal during his time in the service. In Panama, he reported for duty aboard the destroyer, USS J. Fred Talbott, and commenced a six-months tour of the Caribbean. On April 10, 1943, Ricks was promoted to ensign.

The young officer spent the following year receiving additional training, first general instruction at the Fleet Sound School in Key West and at Fort Schuyler, New York, followed by specific schooling in amphibious landings at Little Creek, Virginia, and Fort Pierce, Florida. In June 1944, he was promoted to lieutenant, j.g., and assigned the duties of a small boat group commander aboard the USS Chara. Seven weeks later, Ricks was appointed a full lieutenant. He participated in the amphibious landings in Leyte Gulf in October 1944; his pocket notebook containing briefing instructions for the operation is included in this collection. In November 1944, Lt. Ricks was transferred to the staff of Commodore C. G. Richardson, commander of Transport Squadron 14, aboard the USS Cavalier. In the capacity of assistant control officer, he participated in subsequent landings in the Philippines and the invasion of Okinawa on April 1-4, 1945. The draft of his report of that landing operation is contained in this collection.

The bulk of the personal correspondence between the summer of 1942 and late spring of 1944 consists of periodic letters from Ricks to his mother. But in May and June, he initiated the exchange of increasingly romantic missives with Judy Selby, who he last saw in the summer of 1941. Finally, in April 1945, Ricks obtained a three-weeks furlough, during which time he met Judy in Savannah, and they got married in Ridgeland, South Carolina, on May 12. After a wedding reception at the Ricks Hotel (built by his great-uncle Robert Henry Ricks in 1908 and apparently managed by his father in 1945) in Rocky Mount, he returned to San Francisco and checked into the Naval Hospital at Treasure Island for an operation on his “stern.” In August, Judy visited her husband for three weeks in California. In early September, Lt. Ricks was ordered to attend a “War Adjustment Course” at the Navy Supply Corps School at Harvard University. Finally, on November 3, he was released from. active duty and returned with his bride to Rocky Mount, where they lived with his parents while he resumed his career with Liggett and Myers. In late November 1945, Ricks was dispatched to Knoxville, Tennessee, to open a tobacco market, and resumed the exchange of letters with his wife. When he completed the job in Knoxville and returned to Rocky Mount in early February 1946, the correspondence terminated. Ricks would continue in the Navy Reserve after the war, attaining the rank of lieutenant commander in 1952, before health issues forced his transfer to the retired reserve in 1960. He died on September 5, 1999. Judy Ricks passed away on November 10, 2002.

George E. Hicks is the former CEO of the National Civil War Museum, director of the Airmen Memorial Museum, and director of the Museum and Historical Services Division of the Greenwich Workshop, Inc., in which capacity he served as coordinating producer of the video, Enola Gay: The First Atomic Mission, which was included in The Final Act exhibit at the National Air and Space Museum (NASM), 1994-1995. The George E. Hicks Papers contain research files, including copies of official documents, diaries, crew reminiscences, and correspondence; photographs; transcripts of oral interviews; U.S. Air Force unit histories; newspaper and magazine critiques of the controversial exhibit at NASM; script of the exhibit; DVDs; and audiocassettes.

This collection covers many aspects of the development and use of atomic bombs in 1945. Therefore many different codenames were used to describe the people, places, and events that occurred during this time. The Manhattan Project was the research and development project that eventually led to the creation of the atomic bomb, starting in 1939. Trinity was the code name for the first test of the atomic bomb that took place on July 16, 1945. Silverplate was the code name for U.S. Army Air Forces participation in the Manhattan Project. Originally it was just an airplane modification project that would allow B-29 bombers to carry and drop the atomic bombs, but it eventually grew to include operational and training aspects as well.

When using this collection, it will also be helpful to know the names of the planes used to drop the atomic bombs, as well as the crew members involved. Of the B-29 planes used in the atomic missions, The Great Artiste was the only plane to fly on both missions. It was used to take photographs and drop scientific instruments used to measure different aspects of the atomic bombs. The crew on The Great Artiste for the Hiroshima mission was Crew C-15, the normally assigned crew. However, the crew on The Great Artiste for the Nagasaki mission was Crew C-13, the crew normally assigned to Bockscar. Because of last minute scheduling changes, the crews for Bockscar and The Great Artiste were switched for the Nagasaki mission.

The crew members of the Enola Gay were Col. Paul W. Tibbets Jr. (pilot and aircraft commander), Capt. Robert A. Lewis (co-pilot), Maj. Thomas Ferebee (bombardier), Capt. Theodore “Dutch” Van Kirk
The members of Crew C-13 were Capt. Frederick C. Bock (aircraft commander), 1st Lt. Hugh C. Ferguson (co-pilot), 1st Lt. Leonard A. Godfrey (navigator), 1st Lt. Charles Levy (bombardier), M.Sgt. Roderick F. Arnold (flight engineer), Sgt. Ralph D. Belanger (assistant flight engineer), Sgt. Ralph D. Curry (radio operator), Sgt. William C. Barney (radar operator), and Sgt. Robert J. Stock (tail gunner). The members of Crew C-15 were Maj. Charles W. Sweeney (aircraft commander), Capt. Charles Donald Albury (co-pilot), 2nd Lt. Fred Olivi (regular co-pilot), Capt. James Van Pelt (navigator), Capt. Kermit Beahan (bombardier), M.Sgt. John D. Kuharek (flight engineer), S.Sgt. Ray Gallagher (gunner, assistant flight engineer), S.Sgt. Edward Buckley (radar operator), Sgt. Abe Spitzer (radio operator), Sgt. Albert Dehart (tail gunner), Cmdr. Frederick L. Ashworth (weaponeer), Lt. Philip Barnes (assistant weaponeer), and 2nd Lt. Jacob Beser (radar countermeasures).

The collection is divided into two separate series. The first series contains materials related to the Smithsonian’s National Air and Space Museum’s proposed exhibit commemorating the Enola Gay and the fiftieth anniversary of the dropping of the atomic bombs on Hiroshima and Nagasaki. The exhibit, scheduled to open in 1995, was a point of controversy between the National Air and Space Museum (NASM) and veterans’ groups, particularly the Air Force Association. The exhibit was eventually scaled down drastically because of public outcry. The various materials in the George E. Hicks Papers related to the controversy include newspaper clippings, articles Hicks authored against the opening of the exhibit, and the original exhibit and layout script as proposed by NASM. The materials that were received in labeled folders were kept in their original order and retain the titles assigned them by Hicks.

The second series in the George E. Hicks Papers contains materials related to a documentary that Hicks made about the atomic bombs dropped on Japan in 1945. These include his research files; interviews with the crew of the Enola Gay, Bockscar, and The Great Artiste; publications related to the atomic bomb; and photographs.
The photographs included are mostly of crew members, with occasional photographs of their family members and other armed services personnel. As with the previous series, these materials have been labeled exactly as Hicks had them.

Series 1: Materials related to the National Air and Space Museum exhibit on the Enola Gay and the Atomic Bomb

166 contains the NASM Enola Gay exhibition label script as released in 1994; an article by George E. Hicks titled, “The Enola Gay Controversy”; an undated speech on the subject by Hicks; and Hicks’s handwritten notes.

167 contains materials that Hicks included in two research binders labeled, “NASM Exhibit on the Enola Gay I” and “NASM Exhibit on the Enola Gay II.” These folders contain articles published in various newspapers and journals, as well as research materials on the restoration of the Enola Gay.

168 contains various folders that Hicks included in three research binders labeled, “NASM Exhibit on the Enola Gay III,” “NASM Exhibit on the Enola Gay IV,” and “NASM Exhibit on the Enola Gay V.” These materials include copies of articles and his personal research.

Series 2: Hicks’s research files concerning the Enola Gay, Bockscar, and the Atomic Bomb

[169-170] contain photographs that Hicks gathered during his research. These materials were arranged in two series of alphabetical subject files and have been kept in their original order and labeled as Hicks had them. These include photographs of the crew members and scientists; Hiroshima and Nagasaki before and after the atomic bombs were dropped; and miscellaneous events and people.
