RALEIGH, N.C. – Don’t miss this opportunity in less than two weeks! The North Carolina Museum of History will be hosting the second lecture of the Notable North Carolina Lecture Series: Philanthropic Families: The Reynolds Family on Tuesday, February 21 at 7 p.m.

What made North Carolina stand out in the New South? Distinguished families with foresight, integrity and a dedication to philanthropy. R.J. Reynolds and his wife, Katharine—his junior of 30 years—helped to transform Winston-Salem in both industry and culture. This evening program will bring together two respected presenters to discuss the family and their home, Reynolda House.

- Michele Gillespie, Dean, Undergraduate College of Arts and Sciences, Wake Forest University, will bring to life the Reynoldses’ unique partnership that reached beyond the family. The couple had a desire to elevate working conditions for their employees and for those within the community. R.J. Reynolds was the first Southern white man to establish a hospital for African Americans in the South. Together, the couple helped shape Winston-Salem, just as the city and its residents shaped the two of them.

- Phil Archer, Betsy Main Babcock Director of Program and Interpretation for Reynolda House, will follow the couple’s vision and design of Reynolda House. Reynolda House was home to a farm complete with the latest technology and practices, a dairy, recreational facilities and a school. In 1956 the family donated 300 acres of the Reynolda estate to Wake Forest University, and in 1967 the house was opened as a museum.
Following the presentation, Michele Gillespie will sign copies of Katharine and R. J. Reynolds: Partners of Fortune in the Making of the New South. The University of Georgia Press stated that the book “Katharine and R. J. Reynolds reveals the broad economic, social, cultural, and political changes that were the backdrop to the Reynoldses’ lives. [It portrays] a New South shaped by tensions between rural poverty and industrial transformation, white working-class inferiority and deeply entrenched racism, and the solidification of a one-party political system.”
