Most traditional hero archetypes put responsibility for others before themselves. One place to find examples of the hero archetype is art. Research a piece of classic art depicting a mythical hero.
- What elements of scenery, lighting, posture or expression does the artist use to hint at the heroic nature of the subject?
- What do you feel is the characteristic that truly defines this hero?

Create an image that depicts a hero of your own creation. Use the same elements to convey the heroism of your character. Describe your hero and her/his qualities in a short paragraph.

What responsibility do you think the state government has to educate the citizens on the state’s history in the Civil Rights Movement?

Create a detailed example of a speech, pamphlet, or public memorial to help the public remember the legacy of these events and engage in continued discussion of what our personal responsibility is in educating others about the history of the Civil Rights Movement.

Choose 2 of their points and expand upon the science underpinning their conclusions in a way that lay people can understand. How can you employ your understanding of science to help others understand these complicated issues? Use a platform of your choice to educate someone or a group regarding these issues.

MINDFULNESS

You are responsible for being in control of your emotional well-being.

Write down a list of things that are completely out of your control, things that are inconvenient, and/or things that challenge you. Don’t prevent your mind from letting all of those things or feelings come out.

Once you have a good list, then think about ways you can turn those negatives into positives, ways that the situation can become productive for other things, ways that you will grow during the challenge. Try to apply these positive changes daily in order to maintain a positive emotional well-being.
Analyze the lyrics song, “If I had a Million Dollars.” How realistic are the items they buy? Are they spending responsibly? The last line says, “If I had a million dollars, I’d be rich.” Do you agree? Create your own song explaining what you’d buy with a million dollars.

Since winning a million dollars is unlikely, research the salary for a profession you’re interested in and create a budget for yourself. What are your costs? How does your professional budget compare to your million-dollar expenditures? Would you still buy the things in your song?

Ecologists are scientists who study the relationships between living organisms, including humans, and their habitats.

Choose two animals that live in the wild, each in different North Carolina habitats.
- What are the animals’ needs for water (related to habitat and drinking)?
- What are the potential water issues they face (e.g., drought, pollution, predators)?
- How do humans affect the water that they need?

Research current NC laws that are related to water and write a persuasive letter to your representatives about 3-5 changes or additional laws that would help responsibly protect the water of these two specific animals.
