TRAVELING EXHIBIT PROGRAM

N.C. in the Great War

EXHIBIT BACKGROUND

This traveling exhibit contains panels with information on both the soldiers abroad and the homefront here in North Carolina. It shares information on the various military installations in the state, discusses U-boat activity off the N.C. coast in 1918, and seeks to put the war in context.

The panels can be placed in any order and configuration and can be complemented by two mannequins. One, a soldier dressed in full uniform with weapon and complete backpack and gear, and a Red Cross nurse, dressed in a ward dress, apron, and cap with veil. Other props are available for loan and the complementary exhibit handbook contains information on the war in North Carolina and educational activities.
