Sexual Assault Crisis Calls & Clients over 5 years

The number of crisis calls has decreased slightly over the past three years, and the number of clients has increased slightly over the last fiscal year. Often, sexual assaults are underreported.

2015-2016
2016-2017
2017-2018
2018-2019
2019-2020
(1) The number of shelter referrals due to lack of space for domestic violence victims has increased slightly since last year. This may be due to shelters experiencing decreased space and capacity as a result of the COVID-19 pandemic and social distancing requirements.

(2) Due to COVID-19, many agencies have seen a decrease in capacity for serving victims of domestic violence and sexual assault. Shelters, hotels, and hospitals have specifically been unable to accommodate the number of clients. This likely resulted in a decrease in reported shelter and hospital services. According to the North Carolina Coalition Against Domestic Violence (NCCADV), domestic violence clients are experiencing more severe and urgent needs, and are at an increased risk for lethality. Per the North Carolina Coalition Against Sexual Assault (NCCASA), some sexual assault victims are at home with their abusers due to the pandemic and are less likely to be able to access resources and support.

(3) A change in reporting in 2015 may have resulted in decreased numbers of crisis calls and clients over the past 5 years.

(4) Since March, 2020 many domestic violence and sexual assault agencies altered business operations, mainly working remotely as a precaution to COVID-19. Therefore, approximately four out of 12 months of data captured were affected by closures, delays, and other impacts related to the COVID-19 pandemic. Furthermore, agencies were asked to report "in-person" services which may have resulted in a misrepresentation of the total number of services provided.

Overall trends include:
- Since 2016, there has been an increase in the percentage of men seeking domestic violence and sexual assault services;
- Since 2011, there has been an increase in the percentage of African American domestic violence clients;
- Since 2019, there has been an increase in the percentage of shelter services provided to children; and
- The majority of DV and SA clients are between the ages of 25 and 59 years old.
