Re: Travel restriction lifted

On September 19, 2016, Gov. Pat McCrory directed North Carolina state government agencies to temporarily curtail all non-essential travel due to a temporary fuel shortage in North Carolina and other southeastern states. The broken pipeline in Alabama, which caused the fuel shortage, has been repaired and fuel supply operations have returned to normal. Therefore, all travel restrictions are lifted and agencies can return to their typical travel guidelines.

Thank you for your cooperation during this unexpected challenge.
